Miss Butter-and-Eggs looked brightly up,
And nodded, "I wouldn't be blue!

Your coat is trimmed with soft fringe, not rags;
And your heart is honest and true.

"God gave you the nice red clothes you wear,
And he gave us each our places;
And, maybe, instead of work, of us
He asks but for glad, bright faces."

Now Ragged Robin no longer frowns,

But greets all the children that pass;

While wise Miss Butter-and-Eggs plays on,

With the Burdock out in the grass.
